

NEWS • News

Future state bill aims to speed up Hyperion odor recovery

The bill is set to be introduced in the coming weeks and will require air-quality monitors in the community.

By TYLER SHAUN EVAINS | tevains@scng.com |

PUBLISHED: February 11, 2023 at 7:00 a.m. | UPDATED: February 11, 2023 at 11:17 a.m.

The Hyperion Water Reclamation Plant could soon have new state rules to follow.

Assemblymember Al Muratsuchi, D-Torrance, will introduce a new state bill in the coming weeks that would possibly require the wastewater recycling facility and its operator, Los Angeles Sanitation & Environment, to do more to mitigate odors caused by hydrogen sulfide, which have lingered for nearly two years.

Officials with LASAN and the city of Los Angeles have repeatedly say they are working hard to fix various issues and are eager to address odor complaints.

But El Segundo residents say they have been continually plagued by hydrogen sulfide odors since a July 2021 backup at Hyperion caused the facility to flood and spill millions of gallons of sewage into the ocean. The incident, officials said then, nearly crippled Hyperion, the region's largest and oldest wastewater reclamation facility.

The potential legislation would expand on the Muratsuchi-authored Assembly Bill 1647 — which was enacted in 2017 and required oil refineries to install community and fence-line air quality monitors to keep track of toxic chemicals — to large wastewater facilities, such as Hyperion. Fence-line monitors are already in place around Hyperion's perimeter, but adding monitors in neighborhoods would further allow officials to detect the odors residents continue to complain about.

"It's a transparency and accountability measure to put pressure on Hyperion," Muratsuchi said, "in hopes that Hyperion will do the right thing and address the problems."

Muratsuchi will introduce the legislation, which is still currently unnumbered, as a spot — or placeholder — proposal before the Feb. 17 deadline to introduce new bills. He'll introduce the official bill before committee hearings begin in March.

If all goes smoothly, the bill could be on Gov. Gavin Newsom's desk for consideration by September, Muratsuchi said. It would first need to get through committees and be passed by both the Assembly and state Senate.

Muratsuchi began looking into Hyperion in December after redistricting put the plant and El Segundo in his district, he said. But state Sen. Ben Allen, D-Santa Monica, had previously been talking with El Segundo and Hyperion officials about remedying the remaining effects of the spill.

"The bill's important," Allen said. "But the conversations with Hyperion are just as important."

Allen said he would love to get a system in place to relieve El Segundo residents without a bill.

But Hyperion's compliance record, he said, shows that this push may be needed.

"There's been some progress," Allen said. "But it's a long term project."

Hyperion had initially said it could meet a 2025 deadline to finish replacing all the corroded covers on its primary clarifiers — the main source of the odors — but Allen and his team got officials to agree to speed that up to the end of this year.

The South Coast Air Quality Management District board also last added a new stack of conditions last month to an order of abatement it issued the facility in September to make officials there clear up the odors more quickly. Since the 2021 incident, AQMD has also hit Hyperion with multiple notices of violation.

During that January hearing, AQMD staff said that the majority of the odors seem to emanate from the primary clarifiers.

Officials representing Hyperion said during that hearing that would continue working to address the odors and that they would comply with the updated terms.

"We look forward to continuing to work with the district to resolve this matter, to address the odor complaints," Adena Hopenstand, deputy city attorney for Los Angeles, said at the time. "We believe this addresses odors and air quality first with an aggressive timeline, and hope with this, we can continue to work on regaining the public's trust and confidence."

Muratsuchi and Allen, meanwhile, are still having discussions with AQMD to understand what more legal authority it needs in order to really address the issues at Hyperion, the assemblymember said.

Besides the hydrogen sulfide odor, Muratsuchi said, El Segundo is particularly concerned about volatile organic compounds, or VOCs — like formaldehyde — and nitrogen oxides, or NOx.

"We want to make sure we're detecting and protecting all surrounding communities," Muratsuchi said, from "toxic chemicals that may be emitted from Hyperion."

Folks in El Segundo, meanwhile, say they are still dealing with the effects every day.

"I filed complaints with Hyperion yesterday (Thursday, Feb. 9) and with AQMD, but Hyperion of course called me back — like they do every day — saying they are in compliance and they don't detect any odors," El Segundo resident Sarah Miszkowicz wrote in a Thursday email to AQMD, Los Angeles County officials, the media and members of the community. "They tell me that maybe it's trash I'm smelling or the construction nearby."

Besides moving up Hyperion's improvement timeline, legislators are also pushing to bring an independent investigator into the facility.

"We're going to put pressure on Hyperion and force them to focus on this issue," Allen said. "This is an issue they really need to take seriously and address."

Sign up for The Localist, our daily email newsletter with handpicked stories relevant to where you live. Subscribe here.

Newsroom Guidelines

News Tips

Contact Us

Report an Error

The Trust Project

Coronavirus Update.

Stay up to date on the latest coronavirus coverage in your area, right in your inbox.

Email Address

Sign Up

Privacy Policy

Tags: Hyperion Sewage Spill, Top Stories Breeze,
Top Stories LBPT, Top Stories TBR

Author Tyler Shaun Evans | Reporter

Tyler Shaun Evans covers city government, school board and community happenings for the beach cities (primarily Manhattan Beach and El Segundo). She was previously an editorial assistant for the San Gabriel Valley Newsgroup. Tyler earned her journalism degree from the University of La Verne in 2018.

The Volkswagen Bus Is Back With A Vengeance

The New VW Bus | Sponsored

Learn More

Tommy Chong: The Horrendous Truth About CBD

Tommy Chong's CBD | Sponsored

Shop Now

PRIME DAY | Sponsored

Amazon Left Scrambling As Prime Users Find Out About Secret Deals

Online Shopping Tools | Sponsored

2023's Top Family SUVs. 3 Rows Of Seating, Tons Of Tech & More

Family SUVs | Sponsored

Learn More

Knee Surgeons Baffled: New Device Relieves Years Of Knee Pain

Health Insight Journal | Sponsored

Learn More

"Once We Tried BlazePod, We Couldn't Imagine Training Without It"

Blazepod | Sponsored

Shop Now

Killer New EVs That Many Don't Realize Are Affordable

New Electric Cars | Search Ads | Sponsored

Amazon Hates When You Do This, But They Can't Stop You

Online Shopping Tools | Sponsored

California's "Grocery Allowance" Everyone on Medicare

This "Botox Alternative Sold Out At Target (in Just 2 Days)

Vibriance | Sponsored

Learn More

How To Empty Your Bowels Every Morning (It's Genius!)

Gundry MD | Sponsored

Learn More

New SUVs On Sale Have Us Speechless

All Things Auto | Sponsored

Search Now

Man arrested in Rancho Cucamonga accused of helping rob $550,000 in heists including in Hawthorne

Daily Breeze

Hawthorne commissioner claims councilmember abused power over hotel developments

Daily Breeze

Cadillac Has Done It Again. This Year's Lineup Has Left Us Speechless

All Things Auto | Sponsored

Search Now

The Secret to Relieving Back Pain is Finally Here

Health Insight Journal | Sponsored

Learn More

Kia Has Done It Again. This Year's Lineup Left Us Speechless (See It Now)

Auto Savings Center | Sponsored

The Jaw Dropping New Volvos Recharge Will Leave You Flabbergasted

Volvo SUV | Sponsored

Italian food in Torrance is ‘crave-worthy’ at North Italia

Daily Breeze

Port of Long Beach’s Pier G extension is complete. This is why officials say it matters

Daily Breeze

Most Affordable Camper Vans

Camper Van Warehouse | Search Ads | Sponsored

The Best Walking Sneakers For Women To Wear All Day Without Discomfort.

Dotmalls | Sponsored

Learn More

The Killer New Volvos Will Leave You Breathless

Volvo Deals | Sponsored

